

The Highland Council is split into three Operational Areas who collectively serve an area which covers one-third of the total land mass of Scotland. The Councils Headquarters are based at Glenurquhart Road, Inverness.

Within each operational area the Council has a number of Planning & Building Control Offices who process planning applications and building warrants and can offer advice, free of charge, prior to their submission. Advice is also given on other planning and building standard matters such as Listed Buildings, Conservation Areas, tree preservation and dangerous buildings.

If you have a query regarding a planning or building control matter your first point of contact should be your local Planning & Building Standards Office.
