Registering to Vote

You can only vote in elections if you are aged 18 or over and your name appears in the register of electors. The register is updated by means of the annual canvass which takes place in the last quarter of the calendar year. From 2001 we can also make changes in the course of the year if your place of residence changes because you move to a new house.

It is not usually difficult for people to determine where they are resident but, if you live at more than one home and you are not sure at which you should register, we will be happy to advise. People should not register to vote at subsidiary residences such as holiday homes.

If your name is missing from the electoral register you can apply to have it added at any time. All you have to do is complete and return this application form. The law dealing with changes in the course of the year requires that a separate application is received from each person and that they sign it themselves.

When your form is received it will be added to the list of current applications. Any elector can object to the alteration of the register. If this happens we will write to you and explain the procedure for hearing the objection and, if we need more information, we will ask you for it at that stage.

If there is no objection and your application is granted, then we will alter the register. This will take between two and six weeks depending on the date on which your application is received.

When the register has been altered we will write to you confirming that the process has been completed.

If you have moved house, we will also tell the Electoral Registration Officer (ERO) for your old address about it so that your name can be removed from that register. There are a few people (for example, students) who may be able to appear on the register at two different addresses. If you think that this might apply to you please enclose a note to that effect with your application. It is an offence to vote more than once at any election.

There are special rules concerning alterations to the register during an election period, which mean that alterations cannot take effect until the election is over. In such a case you can apply to the ERO for your old address for a postal vote.

Registering to Vote – Remand Prisoners

Remand prisoners who are not registered to vote can register at their place of detention or at their home address or if otherwise homeless by making a declaration of local connection. This form covers all three cases. As a general indication, if detention is unlikely to exceed six months, registration to a home address or by declaration of local connection may be most suitable.

Declaring a local connection does not require that you have a home – you can indicate a place where you spend a substantial part of your time. The address of that place should be entered in the box in Section 3 overleaf.

While you are detained, it may be best for your correspondence to be sent to your place of detention. Once you are released, other arrangements can be made on request.

A declaration of local connection must be renewed annually. If you choose to register in this way, the ERO will send you a reminder when your current declaration is about to expire.

The Two Versions of the Register

The Electoral Registration Officer makes and keeps two versions of the Register of Electors – the full register and the edited register.

If you wish your name to be excluded from the edited register, tick the box at Part 6 of the application overleaf.

The Full Register

The full register lists everyone who is entitled to vote. It is available for inspection at certain council offices. The law says who can have a copy of the full register and what it can be used for. This includes electoral purposes, the prevention and detection of crime and checking your identity when you have applied for credit. The full list of such persons and purposes is given in the Representation of the People (Scotland) (Amendment) Regulations 2002. It is a criminal offence to pass the full register on to anyone else or to use it for any other purpose.

The Edited Register

The edited register leaves out the names and addresses of electors who have asked for their details to be excluded from that version of the register. The edited register can be bought by anyone and they may use it for any purpose.

Absent Votes

If you would find it difficult to vote in person at an election it is open to you to apply to vote by post or by proxy. Members of the armed forces who may be posted elsewhere at short notice may find a proxy vote best suits their needs. Further details can be obtained by calling the Freefone number shown overleaf. The relevant forms can be obtained from the offices noted below. Do not wait for an election before applying.

How to return this form

Please return this form to the Electoral Registration Officer at any of the offices shown below.
