

SUMMARY

- The finalised Housing Land Audit indicates a sufficient land supply to meet aspirations for the delivery of new homes up to 2021, and importantly will meet the requirements identified in the Highland Wide Local Development Plan (Proposed Plan) and the Housing Need and Demand Assessment that has been prepared to support that document.
- The number of housing completions by Highland Council Ward between 2007 and 2010 shows that there has been a 32% decrease in the number of new houses completed.

Scottish Planning Policy (2010) indicates that planning authorities should ensure that sufficient land is available to meet the housing requirement for each housing market area in full. A supply of effective land for at least five years should be maintained at all times to ensure a continuing generous supply of land for house building. Planning authorities are to manage land supply through the annual housing land audit, prepared in conjunction with housing and infrastructure providers. The housing land audit is used to monitor the availability of effective sites, the progress of sites through the planning process, and to analyse work on house completions. It includes information up to 31st December 2010.

The Audit details all sites identified for housing in Local Plans throughout the area, as well as “windfall” sites (which have received planning permission for housing and which have not yet been built). For each of these sites, a number of key pieces of information has been collected and brought together. Of critical importance are the likely build rate (programming) of development on each site and the identification of any constraints holding up development. These will be made available on the Highland Council website.

This year’s Housing Land Audit sees the inclusion of all housing sites including long term sites and expansion sites. Sites identified within the Highland Wide Local Development Plan Proposed Plan are also included, albeit that this plan will still be subject to Examination by a Scottish Government appointed Reporter.

Consultation

During September to December 2010, the Planning & Development Service undertook a consultation exercise on its Draft Housing Land Audit. All known owners and developers of housing sites allocated within local plans were contacted and asked to provide updated information on the status of the site. Approximately 130 out of 383 landowners or developers responded to the consultation, providing information on 284 individual sites.

The responses received during the consultation period have been supplemented with professional assessments by local planning officers on the likely build rates on sites incorporated into the finalised Audit. A summary of this information by Council Ward and Housing Market Area is set out below.

The delivery of some of the units in (1), (2) and (3) may be affected by the lack of adequate water and drainage systems.

- Units on Local Plan housing sites programmed between 2010 and 2014.
- Units with planning permission on large windfall sites (sites not identified for housing in Local Plans) as at December 2010. Large sites are for 5 or more units.
- Units with planning permission on small windfall sites (sites not identified for housing in Local Plans) as at December 2010. Small sites are for 4 or fewer units.
- Units on Local Plan housing sites programmed for delivery in 2014 and beyond. These units are still considered to be effective.
- Units on Local Plan housing sites that are subject to ownership, physical, landuse or infrastructure constraints. These are not considered to be part of the effective land supply.

Recent Housing Development

Housing completions are calculated quarterly and are based on completion certificates issued through The Council's Area Planning and Building Standards Offices.

The number of housing completions by Highland Council Ward between 2006 and 2010 is set out in Table 3.

The significant number of houses on large "windfall" sites (5 or more housing units) in this Housing Land Audit has risen to 3,818 compared with 3,652 in the 2007 audit. This combined with the high level of single house completions in Highland again demonstrates the importance of smaller scale and single house developments in meeting Highland's housing requirement.

Conclusions and Next Steps

The completed Housing Land Audit is available on The Council's website. Figure 1 (below) gives an example of the information that is presented.

Overall, there is sufficient land in Highland to meet our identified housing requirements, which have been drawn up with a positive outlook on economic growth across the whole area during the current plan period. This is in line with Scottish Government advice on providing an effective supply of housing land and assisting wider economic development.

Having identified the key constraints affecting housing development in Highland, the Council will seek to resolve these by informing the investment programmes of its partners (e.g. Scottish Water) and taking this latest information into account as part of the ongoing review of Local Development Plans. In particular the preparation of the Inner Moray Firth Local Development Plan will allow further sites to be identified to address any localised supply difficulties that there may be (whether that is in relation to infrastructure provision or where landowners are not releasing land for development).

The next Housing Land Audit will be prepared with a base date of 31st December 2011 and site surveys will be undertaken during the year to confirm the position.
