'Archives reveal the past, explain the present, and guide the future. They are essential to good administration, to the democratic and legal rights of the citizen, and to a proper understanding of both the past and the present'.

Scottish National Archives Policy, 1998.

WHAT ARE ARCHIVES?

DÈ THA ANN AN TASGLANNAN?

Archives are the records of official bodies, businesses, societies and individuals which have been identified as worthy of permanent preservation. Since they are a unique record of our past, archives need to be preserved in secure, environmentally controlled conditions from where they may be made available to the public for research.

THE HIGHLAND COUNCIL ARCHIVE SERVICE TASGLANN COMHAIRLE NA GÀIDHEALTACHD

The Archive Service is responsible for locating, preserving and making accessible archives relating to all aspects of the history of the geographical area of The Highland Council.

The Archive Service is part of The Highland Council's Education, Culture and Sport Service. It enables the Council to meet its statutory obligation to make 'proper arrangements for the preservation and management of records' Local Government [Scotland] Act, 1994, s.53.

Archives are used for a wide variety of purposes such as to research the history of a Highland community, or of a particular house or property, to research family history, to assist in legal and official enquiries, and for research into many aspects of the social, economic and political history of the Highlands.

Detailed catalogues of many of the collections held by the Archive Service are available for consultation in the searchrooms. Online access to SCAN (the Scottish Archives Network) and other archival websites, is also available in the searchrooms.

Photocopies and photographs of archives can be obtained, depending on copyright and on the physical condition of the document (a list of current charges is available).

Report

The Archives staff are on duty to advise users and to guide them towards records which are relevant to their enquiries, and to assist in interpreting the records. Staff are able to answer brief enquiries about the availability of records by post, by email, or by telephone. More extensive research into the collections can be undertaken for a fee (please ask for details).

Surveys of archives held in private or institutional hands can be undertaken, and reports provided.

Advice on the preservation and conservation of documents is available from the staff of the Archive Conservation Unit.

An Education and Outreach service is available from the Archive Service. Visits to the centres can be arranged for school groups, community organisations, and local and family history groups. Exhibitions can be staged at external venues, and the archivists are available to give daytime or evening talks as required.

The archives in the care of The Highland Archive and Registration Centre date from the 15th century to the present day, and consist of documents in different formats from charters, minute books, correspondence and accounts, to maps, photographs, and films. With certain exceptions these may be consulted free of charge in the public searchroom.

The main series of official records held at The Highland Archive & Registration Centre are those created by The Highland Council and its predecessors, the former Regional, County, District and Burgh Councils:

- The Counties of Inverness, Nairn, Ross and Cromarty, and Sutherland from the 18th century to 1975. (NB records of the County of Caithness are held at the Caithness Archive Centre, Wick.)

- The Burghs of Cromarty, Dingwall, Dornoch, Fortrose, Grantown on Spey, Invergordon, Inverness, Kingussie, Nairn and Tain from the 15th century to 1975. (NB records of the Burghs of Fort William, Thurso and Wick are held at the Area Archive Centres in Lochaber and Caithness as appropriate.)

- The Highland Regional Council, 1975-1996.

The records of local government administration include:

- Education records from the 1860s, including logbooks and admission registers for more than three hundred schools.
- Poor relief records, 1845-1929.
- Records of Highway Authorities, including Turnpike Trusts, 1804-1890.
- Property valuation rolls, 1868-1989.
- Dean of Guild and Building Control plans and registers, 1890-1975.
- Inverness Burgh records include High Court and Inverness County Sheriff Court process papers, 17th – 19th Century.
- Abridgements of Sasines for the Counties of Argyll, Caithness, Inverness, Nairn, Ross and Cromarty and Sutherland from 1781.
- Police archives, 1858-1992.

Among the many hundreds of privately deposited archives in the care of the Highland Council Archives there are:

- Estate and family papers.
- Business and industrial records.
- Church records.
- Records of societies, and other local organisations.
- Records relating to the history of tartan.
- Maps and plans, including estate maps, Roy's Military Survey, and extensive holdings of 25": 1 mile scale Ordnance Survey plans dating from the 1860s.
