Protection Site 1 Any area proposed for development

3.1 Address / Description of Land

3.4 Why should the land be protected? A historical problem of protected species being unlawfully disturbed by development could be overcome by planners producing an annotated map of the general area of development within the Local Plan, with data from the National Biodiversity Network Gateway (NBN). This could be complemented by adding to the planning application a habitat checklist, which, if a specific habitat or species is identified appropriate action would then be implemented.
