

Press Release [19/03/16]

A flavour of the activities undertaken through the Highland Seashore Biodiversity Project..

Project Co-ordinator Janet Ullman shows a couple of young enthusiasts that there's more to the shore than first meets the eye.

Getting up close and personal with coastal critters on the Countryside Ranger training weekend.

Investigating seashore life at low tide on one of the Genuig Seashore Festival day.

Mike Kendall explains how mud dwellers burrow into sandy and muddy shores on Nairn beach.

Launching St Kilda mailboat replicas at the Strathnaver Seashore festival.

Coastal rowing session, part of the 'Wick Waves' Festival.

Press Release [19/03/16]

Press Release [19/03/16]

Some of the project outputs..

Press Release [19/03/16]

Seashore Families card game – a fun way to learn about sea creatures and seaweeds including their Gaelic names and traditional uses.

Councillor Audrey Sinclair presents a camcorder with underwater housing to Emma Bennett-West, winner of the Project's Photographic Competition.

The winning photograph of a starfish in Kirkton Bay, the competition was run on the Project's Facebook page, with over 2,500 people viewing the online gallery in any one week.