Engaging with Police and Fire and Rescue Services at Area Committee

Report by the Head of Policy and Reform

Summary

This report describes the role of members in engaging with the new national services for police and fire and rescue. It is provided as context for the members in considering the first round of new style performance reports from the national bodies at the City Committee.

1. Introduction

- 1.1 The Police and Fire Reform (Scotland) Act 2012 established the Police Service for Scotland and the Scottish Fire and Rescue Service (SFRS) and abolished the former territorial forces and their governing bodies from 1st April 2013. The legislation brings new roles for members and the Council in engaging with the national services.
- 1.2 There are several community safety commitments in the Council's Programme 'Working Together for the Highlands'. They include: the maintenance of police numbers in the Highlands; the role of elected members in agreeing priorities for local plans for police and fire and rescue services and monitoring their performance; and engaging effectively with the new national services and the Scottish Ambulance Service.

2. The role of local authorities and elected members in engaging with the new single services

- 2.1 The Act sets out the roles for local authorities in local policing and local fire and rescue services. These are listed in an extract from the Act at Appendix 1. Two key requirements of the Act are that the chief constable must ensure there are adequate arrangements in place for policing each local authority area and the SFRS must ensure there are adequate arrangements in place for carrying out its functions in each local authority area.
- 2.2 Engagement for both services with the Council means, in summary, that they must:
 - Consult with the Council on the designation of a local commander for police and a local senior officer for the fire and rescue service (these officers can cover more than one local authority area).
 - Involve the Council in the setting of priorities and objectives for policing the area and in determining the priorities and objectives for the fire and rescue service.
 - Following the production of the first strategic (national) plans for police and fire and rescue services, the local commander and local senior officer are to submit a local police plan and local fire and rescue plan to the Council for approval and once approved the local commander must publish the local policing plan in a format the Council may specify. The plans must set out priorities and objectives, the rationale for them, how delivery will be organised to achieve them and performance measured and how this aligns with the Single Outcome Agreement.
 - A legal duty for the local police commander and local senior officer to participate in community planning.

- Provide information or reports to the Council on carrying out police functions and fire and rescue service functions, statistical information on police complaints or any other reasonable information requests of both services.

2.3 In addition the Council can:

- Monitor and provide feedback on any policing and fire and rescue service matter and any recommendations for improvement; and
- Specify any policing measures to include in the local police plan.

2.4 Local members have important engagement and scrutiny roles; but have no role in specifying operational matters or in agreeing resource allocation.

3. The Council's approach to engaging the national services

3.1 As part of the Council's Scheme of Delegation the Community Safety, Public Engagement and Equalities (CPE) Committee has responsibility for enabling local scrutiny and engagement with the national bodies and their governing boards. In addition the Education, Children and Adult Services (ECAS) Committee has responsibility for engaging with the national services on their local plans for the following policy areas: youth justice; alcohol and drugs; adult protection; child protection; and offending and re-offending.

3.2 In the first 15 months of the new services, the Council has demonstrated its scrutiny role through constructive challenge of performance information presented to the CPE Committee and it specified the amendments it sought in order to agree the first Highland local plans for police and for fire and rescue services by June 2014.

3.3 Over the past 18 months members of the CPE and ECAS Committees have participated in workshops to develop their new roles and to test out national guidance on scrutiny and engagement. The Council's approach is identified as good practice nationally through the Scottish Government's Building Safer Communities Network and by the national inspection body for police.

3.4 From these workshops members identified some improvement actions to support them in their role locally and with some implications for area committees. These are listed below along with an up-date on progress against them.

1. On-going development of ward plans for Police by engaging members at the ward level.
 - Ward plans were developed for Highland and in consultation with local members and through ward forums. They contributed to the priorities for the Local Police Plan for Highland.
2. Providing performance reports for police and fire services at the Council's Area Committees and City Committee for local scrutiny.
 - These are available for this meeting and with a view to providing them twice a year.
3. Putting arrangements in place so that members receive police briefings on local matters timeously.
 - The Local Police Commander has arrangements in place for staff to brief local members directly when required.
4. Arrangements for the Fire and Rescue Service to engage with Ward Forums, Business Meetings and Community Councils.
 - SFRS attended ward forums to gauge public views on the priorities for the SFRS local plan for Highland.

5. To understand the connections between Highland wide outcomes and local priorities and action.
 - Ensuring community safety requires partnership working with a range of community planning partners, including NHS Highland. For this reason District Partnerships are evolving to include community safety as part of their remit and this should ensure local issues are planned for and responded too appropriately by public services together. Local issues will also feed into the assessment of need across Highland and influence future priorities in the Single Outcome Agreement. These arrangements are new and will be reviewed.
6. Consider how community development approaches could be used to improve community safety locally.
 - Community planning partners have agreed to work together on community development. A new partnership officer working group chaired by the Council's Director of Care and Learning is being established and it will report to the CPP Board and to the ECAS Committee on progress. It will draw on the learning from the new community health co-ordinators located in areas of deprivation and in four rural areas where community account management is supported by HIE. Where community safety issues are found in these communities, community development approaches to improving safety and feelings of safety will be supported by partners. For the City Committee the area affected is Merkinch. This is work in progress and local members will be kept informed of progress.

3.5 The Council's approach to engagement and scrutiny of the national services will continue to evolve. It is likely to be inspected at some point over the next few years by the inspection bodies for police and fire and rescue services and it is taken into account in Audit Scotland's Annual Assurance and Improvement Plan, which identifies whether any additional audit and inspections are required.

4. Effective scrutiny of performance reports

4.1 As performance reports for the Area Committee are now provided for police and fire services, it might be helpful for members to refer to the good practice in scrutiny provided for this purpose. The statement of good local scrutiny and engagement agreed between the Government, Cosla and police and fire services identifies five principles, namely:

1. Focusing on outcomes
2. Understanding local conditions and reflecting the community voice
3. Promoting joint working and best value to secure better outcomes
4. Providing strategic leadership in order to influence service delivery
5. Supporting continuous improvement by providing constructive challenge

4.2 Appendix 2 sets out the questions members can ask of themselves in meeting principle 5 above. These questions should support members when they consider the performance reports provided by Police Scotland and the SFRS. These were used for the member workshops referred to in paragraph 3.3 above.

5. Legal, risk, financial, equalities, climate change and rural implications

5.1 Legal and risk implications

The Police and Fire Reform (Scotland) Act 2012 places new requirements on the Council to engage in the arrangements for local policing and fire and rescue services but without financial or operational decision-making for these services. Area Committees have an opportunity to engage through the scrutiny of local performance reports and in feeding into local plans. Members can be supported in their role by referring to good practice in scrutiny and engagement, as appended.

5.2 Resource implications

There are no implications for Council resources arising from this report.

5.3 Equalities implications

Appendix 2 sets out the types of information members may need to challenge performance information constructively. This includes seeking information about impacts on different groups in the community.

5.4 Climate change/carbon CLEVER implications

There are no implications for climate change or carbon CLEVER practice arising from this report.

5.5 Rural implications

The Highland local plans for police and fire and rescue services both highlight the challenges and opportunities for providing community safety services in rural areas.

6. Recommendation

6.1 Members are asked to note:

- The requirements on the Council for the engagement and scrutiny of police and fire and rescue services;
- The governance arrangements we have for this purpose through strategic, non-strategic and area committees as well as partnership arrangements through community planning and district partnerships; and
- Local members have important engagement and scrutiny roles; but have no role in specifying operational matters or in agreeing resource allocation.

6.2 Members are asked to agree to scrutinise the performance of police and fire and rescue services based on information provide separately for the Area Committee and to make use of the good practice guidance for doing this as set out in Appendix 2.
